[They/Them]

Yeah, it is. Even if Bungie goes back on this, even if everyone decides to trust them again... those videos weren't just unlisted but deleted. Gone.

They had to be deleted: The company Bungie outsourced all this shit to wasn't just deleting videos, but striking channels. 3 strikes = not only channel nuked, but your entire Google account and everything attached is permanently fucked. Some of the people running these channels used their 'main' accounts for this, couldn't take the risk. Just unlisting videos doesn't protect them from strikes at all. It was self-delete or get permanently blacklisted by Google.
